Short Pungant Paragraphs Gathered Here and There

In 1861 there were seven Methodist Churches in Chicago, now there are 141.

During the month of September only one American was naturalized in Great Britain.

A California paper says that bad water kills as many people as bad whisky. Maybe it does, but we don't have to buy it at fifty cents a pint.

In olden times the newspapers announced births, marriages and deaths under the following heading. "Hatched," "Matched," and "Dispatched." Under the heading "Scratched" should be placed the divorce cases.

A stove designed for use in wagons, which promises to be a boon to rural mail carriers, has been invented by a woman over in Frankfort. It is a combination heating and cook stove and eight inches in height.

A clergyman who resigned his pastorate to take up the practice of law assigned as one reason for his change "that the average man will pay more to keep out of jail for one day than to be kept out of hell for an eternity."

About one man in ten really makes things. The other nine live off him. Of the nine, one operates on him, or tells him how to get out of obeying the law, or teaches him how to save his soul; three govern him, but five sell him things he doesn't want.

A carload of chewing gum ought to keep the young ladies of the northwest supplied with the luxury for some little time; and such a car has arrived in St. Paul, representing a cash order of $12,000 sent east by a wholesale house of the Minnesota capital. The carload aggregated half a million packages, 2,500,000 sticks. Yum, yum!

The most trifling actions that effect a man's credit are to be regarded. The sound of your hammer at five in the morning or nine at night, heard by a creditor, makes him easy six months longer; but if he sees you at a billiard table or hears your voice in a saloon when you should be at work, he sends for his money the next day.

The United States contains representatives of more races and followers of more religions than any other country in the world, yet it is freer than any other from race and religious outbreaks. One of the main reasons lies in the absolute separation of church and state, and in the consequent liberty of conscience and of action which results.

Few persons know why August has thirty-one days. July, which takes its name from Julius Caesar, has thirty-one days and Augustus, who completed the calendar, declined to submit to the indignity of seeing his own month branded with the inferiority of one day less. The astronomers had accordingly to reshuffle the lunar cards, and after some perplexity hit upon the expedient of shearing twenty-four hours from February's glory, in order that August might face the world on a footing of perfect equality with July.

"While out strolling last evening," says a reporter, "we passed a house from which emanated the inspiring strains of music from a piano and the throat of a charming young lady." The only words the reporter caught from the song were something about "dear mother." Passing on and turning down a side street the reporter saw through the kitchen window the dear mother with her arms buried almost to the elbow in a pan of dough, the sweat streaming down her wrinkled face and the hot range enveloping her. She was singing: "We'll Work Till Jesus Comes."

A COMMON SENSE RULING

The President has a way of doing things that must be calculated to well night take away the breath of the red tape stickler at Washington. Recently he authorized an amendment to the civil service rules providing that hereafter a cabinet officer shall have power summarily to remove, without a hearing, any civil service employe in his department who has been guilty of misconduct or who is inefficient is the performance of his duties. Heretofore unworthy employes have been known to take advantage of their civil service status to hold their jobs, and have defied their superiors. This ruling of the president will put a stop to that sort of thing. Possibly the president may have strained his authority a little but his action is based on common sense anyway.

Millions of Blackbirds

John P. Cochran, of Galena, Kent County, says that blackbirds all over Kent County, Md., are commiting serious depredations upon the recently planted wheat crop. He says there were hundreds of thousands of blackbirds in flocks alighting on his wheat which is now just about two inches above the ground. They pulled up thousands of grains of sprouted wheat. Mr. Cochran secured his gun and in one day thinks he killed at least half a bushel of the birds and a peach basket full the next day.

Fifty-three Sundays

There will be 53 Sundays in this year; an occurance that will not happen again for 110 years. This extra Sunday can be utilized in attending church, calling on your best girl, reading the Scriptures, playing with the children, breaking a two-year-old colt, on some other way.—Paonia (Colo.) Newspaper.

WASHINGTON LETTER

Prince Louis, of Battenburg, a rear Admiral in the British Navy and related by marriage to the Royal family of England arrived in Washington about noon having come from Annapolis by special train. He was met at the station by Sir Mortimer Durand the British Ambassador and officials from the Navy Department. The entertainment of a Prince is a notable event socially for the Capital and when an English nobleman visits this country there is just a little more enthusiam than for royal visitors of other countries. Englishman, even when they are Princes seem more like one's own family because of the cordial entente between the countries and the ability of all the parties to converse and understand each other greatly promotes the good feeling. Occasionally princes with unpronounceable names and limited linguistic abilities descend on Washington and while there is just as much firing of salutes and as many exchanges of visits and dinners and receptions etc. there is decided air of weariness about the affairs in which the participants can only exchange smiles with the guest of honor. Prince Louis' appearance at Annapolis aroused enthusiasm. He is in appearance thoroughly princely but in manner and conversation he has the cordial air of trying to live it down. When he met Governor Warfield at Maryland at the door of the Executive Mansion the Governor was evidently undecided what to do with his right hand but the Prince relieved all embarassment by grasping and shaking it heartily. He won the hearts of the women assembled to receive him by asking to see the house and by taking interest in the furniture and the curtains and the domestic arrangements which lie close to the feminine heart. He expressed his admiration of the house saying, "it is so homelike and so cozy, just the kind of a house I like to live in." At the dinner given by Admiral Evans on board the Mayflower he was as Democratic as "Fighting Bob" himself and entered into spirited conversation with all of the officers near him. All this information preceded him to Washington and he was met with enthusiasm not only by his fellow countrymen from the Embassy but by officers detailed to receive him and by the crowds that assembled on the streets to see him pass. Accompanied by the Ambassador he was driven at once to the British Embassy and took luncheon there with a small but distinguished party invited to meet him. At three o'clock dressed in the full regalia of an Admiral of the Britsh Navy he visited the White House and was received by the President. He presented a personal letter to the president from King Edward and while, of course its contents were not made public it is supposed the letter was one of congratulation on the success of the President in the recent peace negotiations between Russia and Japan. Assembled to meet him were besides the President and Mrs. Roosevelt the Vice-President and Mrs. Fairbanks, the members of the Cabinet and their wives and a number of other distinguished persons.

***

The plans for the entertainment of the Prince Saturday include a drive about the city in the morning and a luncheon at the New Willard Hotel by Lieutenant General Chaffee to which sixty guests have been invited. At three o'clock he will be driven to Fort Myer which is situated about two miles from the city and near the historic home of General Lee, known as Arlington. Here he will witness the Cavalry drill which is one of the most entertaining sights the Capital furnishes. Exhibitions of riding which make the performances of Buffalo Bills famous riders seem tame are given there by the soldiers and an afternoon is all too short for witnessing the remarkable feats of horsemanship and the manipulation of field artillery by the troops. In the evening he will be entertained at dinner at the White House and the President and Mrs. Roosevelt who have the tact unknown since the days of Mrs. Cleveland making these formal affairs a pleasure instead of prolonged torture have invited many distinguished members of the official set here. Sunday the Prince will visit Mount Vernon and Monday will leave again for Annapolis, going later to New York where he will submit to as during the three days here.

***

Rear Admiral Rae, Engineer in Chief of the United States Navy has made a report in which he states that there is a deplorable lack of engineers, in the navy, and that if we were to be plunged in war the Navy "would find it self in no condition to win battles." "In these days" he says "The man in the power room of a ship is as vitally necessary to a fleet in action as the man in the conning tower or the gun turret. Good gunnery or able strategy is of no value if the ship cannot be brought into line speedily and precisely." The accident on the Bennington was a shocking confirmation of the findings of the Admiral. Of recent years and probably as a result of the defective personal bill the need of specially qualified engineers has been partially obscured or disregarded. Admiral Rae proposes a method by which engineers shall be supplied to the Navy speedily and his or some other method mustbe applied at once and a competent corps of experts supplied whether they rank in the line or are maintained as a separate staff that our ships may be made effective.

DELAWARE COLLEGE

Atheletics at Delaware College will improve in 1905 and 6. The new $15,000 gymnasium and drill hall is nearly finished and will soon be occupied and will give ample means for training through the winter.

The shower baths and lockers will be big improvements over present conditions. The gym will have movable apparatus, so that it can be easily cleaned and used for drill, etc.

Americans love sports and they must have games and they will take chances. Young men, full of vigor and energy and physicial "go" must have an outlet. Athletics help work this out, and take the place, to some extent, of hazing, fights and foolish student pranks and excesses, and help eradicate vices.

Spirit is improving. More men turn out and try for places. Over half of last year's foot-ball team graduated, but the list was promptly well filled, and the second team is doing good work, with plenty of subs. Large numbers are benefitted. Mr. Mannake, the coach, is doing very good work.

Many students need a prod or a jolt to get them out to work. They lead sedentary lives often, and become flat-chested and round-shouldered, and the work in athletics, field, gym and drill will soon correct defects. Manly qualities are encouraged. Pluck, endurance, self-control, discipline all help.

Schedule of foot-ball games:

October 7, Delaware 17, Williamson, o

October 13, Friends 6; Delaware second, 16.

October 14, John Hopkins, 11; Delaware, o.

October 21, Washington, 6; Delaware, 6.

October 28, Rutgers 10, Delaware 0.

November 4, Washington at Newark.

November 11, George Washington University at Washington, D. C.

November 18, Fordham at New York.

November 25, Pennsylvania Military College at Chester.

November 30, M. A. C. at Newark.

Open play is urged, though under the present rules mass plays will exist for some time. Rough play is on the decline, and any dirty work is put down. Boxing, fencing and swimming and basket ball will be features, with indoor sports in February. There is plenty of base ball material, and a good list of dates is being made.

Tennis is very popular. Work in the gym will be systematic. The running track will be of great value for wind, etc. Usual relay and track teams will be tried out in class events, with many entries.

The Alumni should help athletics. Students give $4, Faculty $5. Why not Alumni and friends? Six setting-up exercises are given through the year. Lung exercises for deep breathing, marching step, 2 arm exercise, 2 leg exercise, erect carriage, confidence and discipline.

The foremost idea in College is to help make men, good for toil and effort and strife; men who can tackle any problem, and make good; confidence in power to do, and strength to carry through.

Control of athletics is in the hands of the Faculty through Athletic Council, Profs. Short, Smith and McCaskey, and students Fulton, Lovett, Stewart, Griffin. Bona fide students are on teams. Men with conditions are barred. In the gym proportions will be worked out as to height, reach, weight, size of chest, expansion, waist, take up, sizes of arms and legs. Defects noted and work given to fill out same. Courage is gained to a degree in all these lines, and cleanliness, with full breaths and walks and runs through the country benefit all.

THE PEOPLE VICTORIOUS

The victory of the people is overwhelming and the downfall of the gang in Philadelphia was complete and crushing. Yesterday the city was on trial—to-day she greets the country vindicated and redeemed.

This inspiring popular uprising thrills the soul and makes the pulse beat faster. Only in the dark spots of the city, only in the sinks of iniquity, does the Machine hold its own. Even in its strongholds where vice is not rampant it loses ground. And in all the great wards, in all the wide sections of the city where the two hundred thousand sweet and virtuous homes are found, the people move with one accord as if led and quickened by the Lord of Hosts for honesty and righteousness.

The magnificent triumph is enkindling because it shows organized power and staying strength. The victory is inestimable in its value, not merely for Philadelphia but for the entire land. It will exhilarate Philadelphians and it will encourage all true Americans. Its broad and far-reaching significance cannot easily be overestimated. It may truly be called the turning point in the struggle of civic purity.

Whose the victor? Is it the victory of Mayor Weaver? His was the plume that waved at the front of the fight, and his the leadership that fired the loyal hosts. It clears his pathway and arms him with new strength for his great work. It is the victory of the worthy band of counsellors whom he trusted and who upheld his hands. It is the victory of the newspapers that were faithful to their trust as exponents of the public right and the public interests. Beyond all and greater than all, it is the victory of the people, organizing themselves.

THE NEW YORK CITY RESULT

Tammany faces the most serious double defeat of the generation in New York City, whatever may be the final vote. W. R. Hearst, in the contest for Mayor, has split the Tammany vote in two. If Mayor McClellan is chosen his narrow plurality is only due to Republican votes, in panic over the possibility of Hearst's election. Had Tammany Hall faced a fusion candidacy, based on the honest treatment of public service corporations, it would have been beaten. In New York, as in Philadelphia, a boss and a mere Machine can no longer rule a great city.

Whether Mr. Hearst contests or not—and on imperfect returns this remains in doubt, subject to decision at any moment—he has split the Democratic Tammany vote in half. He has shown how perilous is the corrupt Tammany alliance with public service corporations. It has created in New York City, and like alliances are elsewhere, the deep conviction that the masses are cheated by the mutual corruption and the mutual gains of the capitalists who manipulate the public service corporation and the politicians who manipulate the Machine.

MARYLAND SAVED

The defeat of the Poe amendment in Maryland stops the steady advance of disfranchisement which has in successive amendments moved from Louisiana and Mississippi to Maryland. Not only negroes but white immigrants were disfranchised by the Poe amendment. Some 30,000 of the later would have lost their vote. The whole plan was intended to keep a Democratic Machine in power by excluding the negro and the immigrant or making the vote of each difficult. It has failed, and its failure ends Senator Arthur Pue Gorman both as a State boss and a national party leader, while it strengthens the position of Secretary Bonaparte in the State.

MISREPRESENTATION

Because THE TRANSCRIPT brought to light the names of the Democratic Inspectors of Elections who were convicted of altering the certificates of election in 1897, the Every Evening, which had tried to hide them behind the words "vague" and "shadowy", claims that we were trying to palliate the criminality of the Republican Inspectors of the Shellpot District. We distinctly and positively stated that we did not consider the one as an excuse for the other, and that our only reason for mentioning it, was to correct the impression made, and we still think intended to be made, by that organ when it referred to certain vague or shadowy Democratic Inspectors; and because that the only criticism which we had heard had been a comparison of the two sentences. We repeat, we do not think that Matlack and Watson got a day or a dollar too much. But we say now, that the fine imposed in 1897 was entirely inadequate to the crime, which was far greater than the crime of the two above-named. One resulted in cheating a man out of a nomination, the other was aimed at stealing the County.

PENINSULA PARAGRAPHS

With a train only three times a week, the mail coming and going by stage coach, the brilliant gas lights displaced by the old coal oil lamps and the cottages closed and boarded up, with not a soul on the boardwalk and the beach deserted, Rehoboth now to be sure presents a dreary appearance.

The Methodist Protestants of Lewes, who have been worshipping in a tabernacle during the summer, intend to build a new church in the spring. Some repairs will be made to the tabernacle so that services can be held there during the winter, except during the severe weather, when the town hall will be secured and used for church service. Funds are being raised for the new church.

A barn that was built in 1798 has just been torn down and the woodwork was in such good condition that much of the material can be used to erect a modern barn building was located on the farm now occupied by George E. Vickers, of near Lewes, and the materials were of oak and hemlock.

A Virginia preacher has been suspended for six months for kissing a pretty girl. And yet church people wonder why more young men do not enter the ministry.

TWO GOOD ONES BY 'PHONE

A Michigan farmer left a parrot in a carriage with an unhitched horse. Polly said, "Get Up." "Whoa!" yelled the farmer.

Off went the horse.

The farmer ran to a farmhouse and telephoned to stop "Polly" and the team. Twice the team and bird had passed before he could talk to the farmers. Finally the team was stopped. Polly was mad and shreiked "Yes! I would have gone to Middletown, Del., if it had not been for the old telephone."

R. B. Wilkerson a Delaware fruit grower claims to have the most intelligent dog in the country. His name is "Del." and he loaned him to friends for a day's outing. Passing a farmhouse the borrowers of "Del." conceived the notion of informing Mr. Wilkerson, by telephone, as to their luck and as a joke placed the dog's ear to the receiver to let him hear a few words from his master.

Like all sportsmen Mr. Wilkerson saw a chance to spring a joke and did it.

"Come here "Del." said he. Don't you know your master wants you?"

That was all he said. An hour later "Del." came bouncing into his master's home ten miles away. He had deserted his erstwhile friends at his master's telephone call. Wilkerson says his friends declare that if they ever borrow "Del." again they will go where the lines of the Diamond State Telephone Co., do not reach.

Edward Addicks at No. 1006 King street, formerly the Wilmington Club, which for several years has been Addicks' headquarters in Wilmington, was sold at public sale by Sheriff Gillis. The property was sold under foreclosure proceedings and was purchased by H. H. Ward, attorney, for $8825. This was considered a high price for the property. The mortgages, taxes and costs against it amount to about $5500. The city will get $519 for four years' taxes and the county $84 for two years' taxes.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE

Program Being Carried Out as Arranged

NEWARK, Nov. 7th.—The town never had so many school teachers as now. All of them are quartered in comfortable homes. There are few absenties and Superintendent Spaid has little excuse to offer for these. He said it is the object of the Teachers' Institute to have present every teacher within its jurisdiction and that excuses are not to be granted except in case of illness.

The program of the thirty-first annual New Castle County Institute, which began in the Opera House here Monday, is being carried out as arranged and the lecturers have been given the closest attention by the teachers.

Monday night Professor John G. Scores and Mrs. Scores gave a delightful entertainment to a good audience.

When the second days' session began at nine o'clock Tuesday morning, the auditorium was well filled. After singing the hymn "My Faith Looks Up to Thee" and responsive reading of the thirteenth chapter First Corinthians, Rev. Dr. W. J. Rowan, of Newark, offered prayer. Mr. Frank H. Mason sang a solo.

The first discussion of the day was "Literature and History in the Elementary School—Why?" It was led by Prof. Smith Burnham. The subject was instructive throughout.

After the rendition of another solo by Mr. Mason, Prof. W. W. Deatrick spoke entertainingly on "The Master need not sign his name."

"Literature and History in the Elementary School—How?" was next discussed by Prof. Burnham.

Tuesday afternoon Prof. W. W. Deatrick made an address on "Habits and Ideals" and Prof. Smith Burnham spoke on "History in the Grammar Grades."

The institute will end on Thursday afternoon. On Friday the teachers will go on a trip to Valley Forge.

All of the public schools in this county are closed this week.

PHILADELPHIA GANG OUSTED BY VOTERS

McClellan Re-Elected Mayor of New York City by Small Majority
Hurst Will Contest His Election

SUFFRAGE AMENDMENT KILLED IN MARYLAND

The people have triumphed.

The greatest political revolution known in a generation, if not in its history, has taken place.

William H. Berry has been elected State Treasurer of Pennsylvania by a majority estimated all the way from 30,000 to 50,000.

The political corruption in Philadelphia and the tragedy of the Enterprise National Bank aroused the entire people of the State, and they have answered at the ballot box.

Arrogant bossism has met its doom.

Popular unrest and party discontent with the mismanagement of its affairs by so-called State leaders have found expression in a rebuke so staggering that its affect will be felt for a decade to come.

The reign of graft is ended.

The result means purer politics, a conscientious administration of the people's affairs, and, above all, a reorganization of the potent forces of Republicanism.

As startling as the result in Philadelphia has been, the result in the State is none the less impressive.

Rock-ribbed Republican counties like Dauphin and Lancaster and others of less imposing strength, have been torn from their moorings by the shock of an awakened public conscience.

Some conception of the tremendous force of this upheaval can be gathered from the more conspicuous features of yesterday's election.

J. Lee Plummer, the Machine, candidate, lost his own county, a Republican stronghold.

Philadelphia, which will sweep Berry into office with the City party's triumph, will give him, it is now estimated, from 40,000 to 50,000.

Two hundreds of thousands of dollars of corporation money spent by the bosses; the hiring of hordes of repeaters and the attempts to carry slum wards by means of crooked election officers and the employment of thugs—all these devices failed.

Under command of Mayor Weaver, the police force stood firm against fraud and intimidation; wagon loads of repeaters and even some Gang ward bosses were arrested, and, with the ballot-boxes open only to honest votes, the ballots of the people simply overwhelmed the "corrupt and criminal combination masquerading as Republicans."

The vote was unprecedented in volume. In residential wards, such as in West Philadelphia and Germantown, the outpouring of "stay-at-home" voters was so tremendous that the ballot-boxes were filled early in the day and others had to be sent for.

The Gang's plans to create disorder at polling placess in the slum wards and to work their repeaters and ballot-box stuffers created serious disorder in some places, but the presence of mounted and unmounted policemen and special policemen recruited from college students rapidly quelled these outbreaks.

The most amazing feature was the stinging defeat of the bosses in person. "Sam" Maloney lost the Fifth Ward; David Martin the Nineteenth, for the first time in thirty years; Senator Penrose the Eighth, and so on down the list.

The proposed loan bill authorizing the corporate authorities to increase the indebtedness of the city by $4,000,000, to be applied to removal of grade crossings, was approved by a good majority.

Avalanche Swept All Wards

The Machine depended on the first fourteen wards in the city to save its ticket, relying on the vote in these wards to overcome the conceded plurality for the City party in the West Philadelphia and Germantown wards. The avalanche affected the Machine wards as well as those of an independent tendency.

The Second Ward turned up with a surprisingly large City party vote. The Fifth Ward smashed the hopes of the Machine leaders when Harbormaster "Sam" Maloney threw up his hands early in the day and disappeared. He made no further attempt to stem the tide there, which swept that notorious Machine stronghold into the City party column.

The Machine looked for a substantial majority in the Sixth, relying on Select Councilman Thomas J. Ryan, Democrat, to turn the ward for Durham and McNichol. Ryan refused to enter into a deal for the ward and early in the evening announced that the Sixth had gone for the City party by probably 800 majority.

City Commissioner Jacob Wildemore, one hour after the polls had closed, conceded the Fourteenth Ward to the City party, which marked the loss to the Machine of another of its strongholds.

In the Eighth Ward Mercantile Appraiser Devlin battled all day to return a Majority. At 8 o'clock he claimed to have carried his ward, which, wounded, but fortunately these proved untrue.

Gang Early Sees Its Doom

Long before the polls closed, the Gang ward leaders began to concede the defeat of their ticket. A few of them struck out bravely, and said that they would carry their own wards—"that's all we care about"—but no one could be found who venturned to predict a victory for the Organization ticket throughout the city.

At the same time Mayor Weaver, Director Potter, Wilson H. Brown, Rudolph Blankenburg, J. M. R. Jermon, Franklin S. Edmonds and the other City party leaders were happily predicting all sorts of majorities for the City party ticket. Each of them had voted early, and, except the Mayor and Director Potter, had worked and watched about his own division. As every one of the candidates and leaders appeared to vote, he was cheered to the echo by his friends and neighbors.

Republicans Successful in Maryland

BALTIMORE, MD, Nov. 9th.—Although at an early hour this morning the returns from the city were incomplete, only a few more than 200 precints being in, it is certain that the amendment has been snowed under by a majority probably exceeding $15,000, and that the Republicans have in all probability elected their city and at least half of their Legislative ticket, carrying the First and Fourth districts by safe majorities. The Second and Third districts are still in doubt, and it is possible the Democrats may save these out of the wreck, but the Republicans claim all four districts.

Judge Henry D. Harlan, it is estimated, has been re-elected by a large majority. George W. Padgett, the Republican candidate for Sheriff, calculating upon the showing made in the precincts that have been received, is believed to be elected by a majority approaching 2,500, and it is also likely that both Frank H. Sloan and William T. Conn, the Republican candidates for City Surveyor and Clerk of the City Court, will pull through by small majorities.

The Democrats claim both the Second and the Third districts for the Legislative ticket, asserting that all the candidates for the House of Delegates, as well as Mr. J. Charles Linthicum, the candidate for the Senate in the Third district, have been elected by small majorities.

The vote against the amendment was in the nature of a landslide.

Amendment Lost in Maryland

BALTIMORE, MD., Nov. 7th.—All the election returns received up to a late hour to-night indicate the decisive defeat of the Poe amendment to the State Constitution providing for the disfranchisement of the negroes. The American, a Republican newspaper, announces that the Poe amendment has been lost by at least 15,000 votes. The News an independent newspaper, claims that the Poe amendment has met with a decisive defeat.

Returns at midnight indicate the following:

Suffrage amendment defeated in both State and city.

Judge Henry D. Harlan, Dem., re-elected.

Henry M. McCullough, Rep., probably elected Comptroller.

George W. Padgett, Rep., probably elected Sheriff.

Thomas Leigh Marriott, Dem., Senator Gorman's nephew, probably elected to the Legislature.

William B. Rayner, Dem., Senator Rayner's son, probably defeated for Legislature.

City in doubt—probably Republican on the local ticket.

In New York George B. McClellan was elected Mayor and William T. Jerome was elected District Attorney.

In Philadelphia Mayor Weaver defeats the machine.

Results in a Nutshell

Mayor McClellan of New York, elected by less than 2000 over Hearst.

Jerome is probably elected District Attorney, although the result is in doubt.

Ohio claimed by Democrats.

Cox, Machine in Cincinnati, routed.

Colby, the New Jersey reformer, elected State Senator by 15,000.

Maryland defeats the Poe amendment disfranchising negroes.

This in a nutshell gives the salient points of yesterday's election results. Battles for civic purity overshadowed everything. Partisan voting was the exception. Independent voters effected the results.

The following summarizes the results in the various contests:—

NEW YORK—George B. McClellan, Democratic candidate, re-elected Mayor of New York City by a very small plurality over Hearst. "Sun" says Hearst is elected.

District Attorney William T. Jerome probably elected over Osborne, Democrat, by a very narrow margin.

OHIO—Tremendous landslide sweeps Cox, Republican Machine in Hamilton County, out of power. George B. Cox issues statement retiring from politics.

Mayor Tom Johnson (Dem.), re-elected in Cleveland by 8000.

Democrats claim that Governor Herrick is defeated by John M. Pattison.

Cincinnati Fusionists elect Edward Dempsey (Dem.) Mayor by a plurality of 15,000.

NEW JERSEY—Entire Republican ticket in Camden County elected. "Roosevelt Republican" ticket composed partly of Democrats, made a very poor showing.

Everett Colby, the Reform candidate for State Senator, elected by 15,000 plurality.

Cape May County re-elects Representative Hildreth by 800.

Cumberland County 2000 Republican.

MARYLAND—Poe amendment to the State constitution defeated by a decisive vote.

MASSACHUSETTS—Curtis Guild, Jr., (Republican), elected Governor by plurality of 35,000.

VIRGINIA—Claude A. Sawnson, (Democrat), elected Governor. Very light vote polled throughout the State.

RHODE ISLAND—George H. Utter (Republican), elected Governor by 1000 over Lucuis F. C. Garvin (Democrat).

SHOT BY FATHER

UNIONTOWN, PA., Nov. 5th.—Hayden R. Craft, the wealthiest and most prominent business man of Uniontown, shot and killed instantly his only daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Coddington, yesterday morning at 1.30 o'clock. She was mistaken for a burglar while on an errand of mercy for her sick husband.

The dead woman was but 20 years old and a bride of a few months. Distracted at what he had done, the father attempted to turn the weapon upon himself, and was only prevented from suicide by neighbors.

Meantime, the husband, sick unto death, is calling in his delirium for his dead wife.

Several days ago Mr. Coddington was seized wish an attack of pneumonia. In order that he might have every attention and be cared for, he was removed from his own home to that of his father-in-law Mr. Craft. During the time that he has been ill his constant companion and nurse has been his devoted wife.

Yesterday morning the supply of ice in the sick chamber became exhausted and Mrs. Coddington went downstairs to the kitchen to get more. Her father heard footsteps in the kitchen, and he came to the conclusion that burglars had entered the house.

Securing his revolver, he descended the stairs. The door leading into the kitchen was closed. Hearing the footsteps approaching, the father fired through the panel of the door. There was a heavy crash. The bullet had struck his daughter in the breast, and she fell to the floor dead.

Craft rushed into the street and notified his neighbors that he killed a burglar. They entered the kitchen by the door through which the shot had been fired. There they found the young wife on the floor.

The sight of his dead daughter crazed Craft, and he would have sent a bullet through his own brain, had not he been restrained.

Meantime, the house is filled with the piteous cries of the husband for his wife. He does not know of her death, and probably never will, for his condition is very grave.

Mr. Craft is under constant guard in the fear that he will end his life. He has been for years the leading hardware merchant here. His daughter was one of the handsomest young women in Uniontown.

MAYOR'S BILL UNPAID

The Levy Court was late in convening Tuesday morning and but little business was transacted. Arrangements were made by the members of the court to inspect the extension of the Elsmere road recently completed by Stewart and Donohue Tuesday afternoon.

The following communication was received from the Christiana Improvement Company:

We have paid to Robert M. Burns, Esq., Receiver of Taxes and County treasurer under protest county and poor taxes for 1905, amounting to $24 25 levied against our property designated as "lot S. S. Creek line of Walnut street" assessed at $5,000. This assessment is double the amount of the previous year and we hereby make claim for the return of $12.12 being one-half of the taxes paid. The above property was not assessed in the name of this company, but in the name of Charles S. Cleland, and we therefore had no notice of the assessment, and no opportunity of making an appeal therefrom. At the time the assessment for 1905 was under consideration by your honorable court. Yours very respectfully,
Christiana River Improvement Co.,
John S. Rossell, President.

The court fixed Monday next as the date to inspect the Middletown and Odessa road.

The court at 12 o'clock took a recess of 15 minutes to discuss the bill of Mayor Evan G. Boyd of New Castle. Mayor Boyd claims about $1300 for committing vagrants when the county jail was at New Castle. The bill has been held up for several years.

The court decided in a committee of the whole to not reopen the case of Mayor Evan G. Boyd, of New Castle.

The court paid Theobald Harsch, the contractor, who is building the Hare's Corner road extension, $2737.60 which is one-half of the 80 per cent. owned by the county.

THE WORLD'S WAY

BY REGINALD WRIGHT KAUFFMAN

I hold that there are degrees of love. At any rate, Majorie of course will never marry me. She knows me too well to be so foolish. I have inherited enough for only one person to live comfortably upon, and somehow I have never had the time to earn any more than that. It is equally a matter of course that next year I shall be just as madly in love with somebody else—I can say that from long experience and I believe that most men would admit as much if they only had the courage of their convictions.

But even if Majorie does intend to break our engagement before the terrible end of the inevitable six months, the [illegible] fact that I am not going to marry her—or perhaps I should say that she is not going to marry me—is no reason for my confessing my past life to her. Yet—have you noticed?—most women are like that, and Marjorie evidently thinks that because a couple who are about to be married never tell each other about their pasts, a couple who are not going to be married always should. That is her idea of logic, and no doubt that also is why she wants to know all about my affair with the rich Miss Van Astren.

I wonder how she ever knew there was an affair. Do women possess a sex-secret of clair-voyance? It all happened five years ago, and how Marjorie came to guess that it happened at all I cannot imagine. Why, I do not believe that Miss Van Astren knew about it until the end, and I am sure I did not. However, ignorant and innocent as I was, women are deeper than you in your callow youth would suppose, and it is just possible that Gertrude saw it all along—and cared.

I dare say that it was a sad abuse of hospitality. I was just out of college at the time, and had nothing in the world to recommend me except a fairly good presence, a fairly good manner and a fairly good name. I have since learned that the first two of these gifts will, if well managed, go far, but I did not know until that one portentous evening how to manage them, and the third is, at all events, never a hindrance. Nevertheless, I was the Van Astrens' guest. They had taken me up, and after a little judicious maneuvering, dear, old, delightful, impossible Mrs. Van Astren had been unwittingly persuaded to make me. Moreover, I had been clearly given to understand—as who, indeed, had not?—just how the land lay between Gertrude and Lord Dulpuddle, and so, unanifestly, I had no right to do it.

But Gertrude—with whom at golf and hunt I have been having such a jolly autumn—was looking so uncommonly pretty that night of the dance, and it did seem such a pity that she should throw herself away on the biggest catch in England, that—well, after all, there is no accounting for these things. They just occur, and that is all there is to be said about them. Perhaps, in the last analysis, the conventional New-York conservatory, with the conveniently distant music, was most of all to blame.

If it is any extenuation, I am bound to say that at first I was a trifle afraid—just a trifle—and that the minutes slipped by with bewildering speed, albeit we found little enough to say. Nor, when we had sat down there so absolutely alone, had I intended to do it. I was merely observant, and thus I suddenly discovered that Miss Van Astren was perhaps—I have never been certain, but perhaps just a shade tentative.

I was exactly at this point, when—

"Don't you think we'd better go back?" she suggested.

"I should like to stay here forever!" I cried. Originality was not my strong point in those days, but since by all the plunge had to be made, there was no use shivering on the bank because of a mere platitude.

For a moment Miss Van Astren considered my desire in prespective, laughing a little, but neither loudly nor, I thought, mirthfully.

"In the long run," she remarked, "it would be rather dreary existence for you."

I wondered if she was really subtle: "Do you find it so?"

If she was, she dodged beautifully. "I don't pass quite all my time in this part of the house," she explained; "but meant that if you, or anyone, was a prisoner here—as you evidently seemed to wish—you would find it, or any modern conservatory, a decidedly dreary of Eden."

Obviously, this was an unfortunate metaphor. She saw it, but too late: I had taken her up.

"Nor if there was an ideal Eve," I rejoined.

She opened her fan, and for an instant looked hard at it. When she did speak it was without raising her eyes.

"Love in a garden," and Miss Van Astren, "is no more poplar than love in a cottage—noways."

That settled it; so I sighed.

"It is unfortunate," I said.

"It is absurd," said she.

Manifestly, we were at cross-purposes.

"Ah," I wistfully continued, "you want to misinterpret me. But I suppose I should have expected it. Young as I am, I am behind the age. The girl of today has no admiration for effort. She can't appreciate the nobility of labor. And when a man offers his life-work, she only wants the life-work's negotiable results."

I was rather pleased with thisspeech. "The nobility of labor" is a good phrase, even if not strictly new.

Miss Van Astren seemed to think so too. Indeed, presently appeared that I had struck her generally concealed hobby. At any rate she was certainly affected, for she clasped her hands over her knees with a delightfully girlish gesture and looked up at me with serious—and beautiful—eyes. Her voice was gentle and low as Cotdelia's, and, as it is only bare politeness to appear attentive, I bent my face a bit nearer hers.

"You're quite unjust," she said. "Indeed you are, Mr. Randolph, and—and almost cruel. I do admire what you say we women don't—only you do not understand." Then, warming to the abstract, she continued: "Why, I think labor is just the finest and greatest thing in the world!"

"Well, hardly that," I hurriedly interrupted. I did not just then care about the abstract, and at any rate I was never prepared to admit such a proposition.

So, "Hardly that," I protested. "There are other things. There is also—well, there is love, for instance."

"No man can love truly unless he can work truly," commented Miss Van Astren.

I, I suppose, have since loved often, and I have never worked. However, "And to speak conversely," I concluded with a pardonable fallacy, "no man can work truly unless he can have the opportunity to love truly."

"Of course, a labor of love is the noblest kind of work," admitted Miss Van Astren. "What would this world be without such things?"

"What indeed?" I murmured. I was trying to get back to the lost course. There was a little pause.

"So you see you're wrong," she said.

Now, I did not attempt to follow that leap, for what I saw was simply that we were alone, that the palms hid our bench completely, and that Gertrude was exceedingly near and exceedingly charming.

"Do you really believe what you have been saying?" I asked, trying to make out from the corner of my eye where she had suddenly hidden her hands.

"Certainly I do," she answered. "I admire above all other the man who carves out his own way to succes."

I had a vision of the elder Van Astren carving his way not so many years previously with a miners' pick, and I began to perceive that his daughter was a woman of ideas. As a rule I avoid women of ideas, because they are likely to have really only one idea and to be extremely plain. Gertrude, however was too pretty to be dull, so I determined to make a grand exception in her favor.

"The man who makes himself," she was continuing, "has something to look back upon. But what is there to make proud the man who just happens to be born to everything he can possibly desire, however good he is?"

"Or however absurd," I suggested, thinking of Lord Dulpuddle.

"Or however absurd." assented Gertrude, far too rapt to catch my drift. "He does nothing. Where's the use? He simply tries to enjoy himself, and doesn't succeed very well even at that."

"Here, here!" I cried, for down the green alley's perspeetive I had caught a glimpse of his lordship threshing about like the hippotamus, which always more or less resembled, in the evident delusion that he was dancing.

But really I was anxious to get on to Gertrude's companion-picture, to what Van Astren was, and what I, apparently, was expected some day to become. So I simply added:

"And on the other hand?"

"And on the other hand," she unknowingly took my cue, "there is the man who toils to the actual top of the ladder. He must be economical of course—here she absently broke a fine sprig from a priceless orchid—"but he is one who loves obstacles for the sake of overcoming them."

"Yes," I cried, still thinking of Van Astren, "and enemies for the sake of doing them!"

She brought up quickly. Doing them?" she asked.

"Yes," I hurried to elucidate. "It's a fashion of speech. It's—I beg your pardon, but I really believe it's rather slangy. Of doing them a service, it means of course—turning the other cheek, you know."

"Well, I'm afraid the self-made man doesn't do that exactly."

"Well, no, perhaps I don't do that."

"I said the self-made," she corrected.

My protect was stout enough: "And I said 'I'!" Oh, I can by my colors!

"Are you one?" she inquired.

"After the character you've given them," said I, bowing, "I shall do my best."

"Ah, then I know you'll get on. I'm sure you've only to try, Mr. Randolph!"

She clappped her hands—she had discovered them again—and appeared so beautiful that I really believe it might be true—in certain nameless circumstances.

"Do you mean it?" I cried.

"I'm sure of it," she said.

"And do you really think labor is noble, and poverty no disgrace, and that a man can honorably ask a woman to help him in the race, and—and all that sort of thing?"

"Of course I do."

I found that hand. It was gloved, but still—

"Gertrude!" I caied.

"Mr. Randolph!"

But I did not heed her tone. "Then it's all arranged," I said. "When shall I speak to your father?"

"Oh, Mr. Randolph, don't! You're so—so absurd!"

I have never yet been able to see it in precisely that light. She was looking the other way—resolutely—but I think there was—again I am not certain, but I think there was—something tender and beautiful shining in the corner of that eyelash nearest mine. So I started a little, but I did not let go the hand. Then I said in a deeply Byronic tone:

"So you do not practice what you preach?"

"I—why, oh, really, Mr. Randolph, really now, you know!"

Such downright logic is irrefutable, so I dropped the Corsair and took a Werther—and I mean it.

"Of course," I said, "I know what you mean."

"Wyat do I mean?" her voice was lower than ever.

"What else but Dulpuddle?"

"Why, he hasn't even—"

"No, but he's to be given the opportunity."

"Well, I don't know that you've got any right to say so; but anyhow he's—" She paused a moment to consider what he really was, and then, a trifle inconsequently, brought it out: "I'm sure he's a very pleasant man."

I had to admit that he was—of his kind.

"His manners are unimpeachable," she persisted.

"Unimpeachably British," I granted.

"And—and he is even sometimes handsome."

"For his class. Barring his squint and his limp, you might even call him superb." In these affairs it never hurts one to be magnanimous to one's rival. But after all, what is chivalry?

"So, if one should love him," she suggested.

"But one doesn't."

"Well, we can't all do as we like, Mr. Randolph. Life isn't easy, even for the rich—perhaps least of all for the rich. You don't understand."

"I think I do. I'm certain of it. To be sure, Dulpuddle, however good he may be, was born to all he ever could wish or desire. He does nothing. Where is the use? He simply tries to enjoy himself, and doesn't succeed very well even at that."

She was silent, and I felt that my quotation had hit rather hard. So I quickly added:

"Above all, he can't dance."

"No," she confessed, regarding the white toe of a miniature slipper. "No one would ever accuse him of anything so detestably un-British."

"But," I pursued, "all things are his misfortune, not his fault."

"That's just it."

"Then, too, he is a somebody, and," I relented, "I suppose that counts?"

She supposed it did.

"Dear me!" I sighed. "I wish I was a somebody!"

Somehow she had ceased to notice that I was holding her hand, but this remark appeared to remind her of the fact, and she gave it a little twitch. I held fast.

"I wish you wouldn't do that," she said.

I let go. "What?" I asked.

"Oh, nothing."

I recovered the hand. "When we are married—" I began.

"What?"

"I said: 'When we are married.'"

Then all at once she looked up at me, and I was certain about that beautiful something on her long curled lashes.

"You're joking," she said in a queer little voice. "Is it kind?"

Suddenly I knew. The miracle had been wrought.

"If it is a joke," I said sincerely, "it is a very sorry one for me."

"Suppose," she went on, "suppose you had been brought up to certain rigid ideals, to absolute, unquestioning abedience, and with only one destiny in view, Suppose you had been taught—always taught—that it was duty above love, and one in which love was not expected. Suppose—But, oh, you can't understand! How could anyone who hasn't gone through it?"

I took her other hand as we rose, and drawing her closer—a very little closer—I returned her steady gaze; for finally I knew that the miracle had been wrought for all time.

"I can understand," I said, and my voice was as low as hers had been. "I can at last and I always shall. It is no joke now; but I—I beg your pardon. Here too comes your mother and Lord Dulpuddle. I imagine he is about to claim—his dance."

I meant it and pitied myself, but as the years go on I think I pity Lady Dulpuddle even more.

At all events, that is why I could never tell Marjorie my past, and why I could not go further than I have gone, even if she should prove so insane as not to change her mind. But there is no danger of that.

MARYLAND'S GREAT CORN CROP

"The Baltimore Sun has published recently reports from officials of the Western Maryland and the Maryland and Pennsylvania Railroads telling of the enormous yield of corn in the counties of the State through which those roads pass. The increased yie d is attributed in part, and no doubt justly so, to the more careful selection of seed last spring due to the "corn specials" which were run on the roads. The year has been more favorable to the growth of corn, and reports of a splendid crop comes from every part of the State. It is estimated that the average yield of corn to the acre in Maryland is about six barrels or 30 bushels. It is believed that the yield this year is at least 40 per cent. above the average. If that estimate is correct, then the Maryland crop this year is over 40 bushels to the acre, and this is as great as the average yield in any State of the Union, including the great corn States of the Mississippi Valley, as given in the census of 1900."—Ex.
